

DISCERNMENT LEADING TO ORDINATION TO THE (VOCATIONAL) DIACONATE

1. Introduction

A. The “vocational” deacon

According to the Catechism, the work of the deacon is "To assist the Bishop or Priest in Divine Service, and in other ministrations to the people of God" (BCP p. 554). The ordination rite furthers this saying that the deacon is “to serve all people, particularly the poor, the weak, the sick and the lonely [and to] interpret to the Church the needs, concerns, and hopes of the world.” (BAS p. 655) The North American Association for the Diaconate, which represents Lutheran, Roman Catholic, and Anglican deacons, in 1997 adopted a fuller statement: "A deacon is a baptized person called and empowered by God and the Christian Community to be an icon-illuminating Christ as a model of servanthood for all people. The role of the deacon in liturgy mirrors the role of the deacon in church and world."

The deacon fulfills this calling through action and example as servant leader, intercessor, facilitator, visionary, nurturer, and interpreter among diverse people. The deacon is messenger and proclaimer of Christ's presence among us.

B. Guarantee of ordination

The process of preparation for the vocational diaconate is extensive. The discernment process is essential to the goal of ordination and unique to each individual. The final decision to ordain belongs to the Bishop in consultation with and as advised by all involved in the discernment of a potential candidate. There is no guarantee of ordination prior to reaching the status of candidate. Ordination depends also on the availability of an appointment (license) to a specific ministry.

C. Responsibility for process

- i. Authorization and Release. Potential candidates submit the “Authorization and Release” early in the process enabling the request for information in the discernment process.
- ii. Records and files. All files and information requested is the property of the potential candidate in accordance with the Diocesan Privacy Policy. All files are kept confidential at the office of the Bishop and used for the purpose of the discernment process.

iii. Initiative. It is the responsibility of the potential candidate to maintain the momentum of the steps of the discernment process. Applications for status, required forms and documentation and the completion of study requirements will set the pace for movement toward the goal of ordination but at no time restrict the Bishop in his permission or agreement with outcomes. At no time, before candidacy, is there guarantee of ordination.

2. The Identity of the Deacon

The Deacon is a catalyst for the Church's diaconal ministry. A deacon cannot possibly perform that service alone. A deacon models diaconal ministry in the world, but more importantly, the Deacon challenges, arouses, trains and sends forth committed laity to serve the festering sores of society and to fight against and change its injustices. In contrast to the Deacon, the laity's primary place of presence will always be in the world. The focus of the Deacon's ministry is both in the Church and in the world as one who enables the Church's redemptive healing of society. The focus of the laity's ministry is in the world - the place where they are called to use their "gifts of grace God has given ... to pray, work, and give for the spread of the kingdom." (The Catechism BCP p. 554)

An ideal might be that every congregation would have at least one deacon serving collegially with a priest. As a ministry team, the deacon and priest nurture, teach, train and send forth the people of God into the world. One of the reasons that parish priests have had a tendency toward burn out is that they have been trying to do a ministry that really belongs to two orders. The role of the priest and the deacon are separate and distinct but their roles are meant to work together. The parish partnership of priest, deacon and laity under the authority of the bishop symbolizes and models to the world what it means to be a diverse community in the unity of Christ.

The Deacon is the Church's primary catalyst for lay ministry. A deacon nurtures the energy of the gifts of the people, and converts them into a dynamic power of service to the world. As the Priest nurtures the transformation of the People of God with a ministry of knowing (Word and Sacrament), so the Deacon enables the transformation of the People of God through a ministry of doing (caring and advocating justice). Knowing and doing both lead to new being. Priest and deacon each play their particular role in building up the People of God and enabling the church to be God's agent of reconciliation in the world.

The Deacon is unique and stands apart from other ordered ministry and the laity as one who balances the gift to effectively care with the gift to effectively do justice and mercy. Many are called to be expert in either one or the other of these tasks, and do that task well. The Deacon does both. Deacons' caring informs their ministry of doing mercy and justice; just as their active doing of justice and mercy feeds their ability to care.

Discernment Leading to Ordination to the (vocational) Diaconate Expanded Checklist

A. Inquirer to Aspirant

i. Initial meeting with parish incumbent

The inquirer meets with the parish rector, priest-in-charge or interim to discuss possibilities and the sense of call. The incumbent should discuss the ministry options within the Church and clarify questions concerning processes of discernment, educational options and formation requirements of the Diocese.

ii. Parish discernment process

a. Incumbent initiates Parish Discernment Committee (PDC)

If the incumbent believes there is a call requiring testing, he or she initiates the formation of the Parish Discernment Committee according to the outline in "Directive 7.1 The Parish Discernment Committee." Membership on this committee is important and should be determined and appointed in consultation with the inquirer. The PDC meets first with the territorial archdeacon who assists the Committee with orientation and the outlining of the task ahead.

b. PDC meets with the archdeacon

The Archdeacon assures that the required materials are available, negotiates a time for the first meeting which confirms that the Committee clearly understands the process and its importance. Committee leadership roles are decided upon at the first meeting. The work of the Committee is as much an educational endeavour for the parish as it is a ministry to and for the inquirer. Committee members should become familiar with the parish discernment process materials in advance to make opportunities for clarification possible during the meeting with the Commission.

c. PDC meets in sessions with the inquirer

As outlined in "7.1 The Parish Discernment Committee," the Committee meets as specified using the session outlines provided.

d. PDC meets and prepares report

The PDC meets without the inquirer present to compare notes and prepare the report as outlined. Committee members may be assigned specific parts of the report to prepare in advance and seek consensus of the other members.

e. PDC meets with the inquirer to review report

The final meeting of the PDC with the inquirer is an opportunity to present the report and review the process with the inquirer. The Committee should not feel compelled to alter the report following this meeting but should be able to provide truthful justification for its findings. The report becomes the property of the inquirer at the end of the parish discernment process and will be submitted to the Bishop for reference.

f. PDC makes request to the parish corporation for Parish Commendation and Nomination to Holy Orders.

iii. Inquirer submits to the Bishop:

a. Application for Status as Aspirant

b. Parish Discernment Committee report

c. Parish Commendation and Nomination for Holy Orders

The Application for status makes a request for a meeting with the Bishop. With the Application, the Report of the Parish Discernment Committee, and the Parish Commendation and Nomination in the hands of the Bishop, a meeting with the Bishop will be scheduled.

iv. Inquirer meets with the Bishop

v. Bishop gives permission by letter for status as aspirant

The Bishop grants aspirant status for the inquirer or offers advice as to other steps that might be taken prior to granting status. Inquirers should not be discouraged should remedial recommendations be made. The discernment process is a testing, sorting out, and affirmation of call both individual and in community. Early recognition of the possibility of a valid call to ministry is essential in discernment leading to ordination.
